3 TIPS TO ENHANCE TRUST IN TIMES OF UNCERTAINTY

The businesses that thrive during uncertain times are typically the ones that operate with high trust levels with their stakeholders. But, from a practical perspective, how can you earn and build trust, especially in times of uncertainty?

Here, Rachel Botsman, author and Trust Fellow at Oxford University, shares her tips to tackle the topic:

- Tip #1: Set clear expectations. It's vital to be clear about what you expect from others and then have them replay that to you through a feedback loop. Then you can be confident they have received and understood your message.

- Tip #2: Focus on integrity, not transparency. Many organizations are trying to fix trust issues through transparency. It's what we've all been told – transparency increases trust. But Rachel recommends that organizations and individuals focus on integrity as a means of earning trust from their stakeholders.

- Tip #3: Turn empathy into acts of caring. Rachel explains that there is a difference between asking someone how they are and asking how you can help them. Acts of caring enable you to turn empathy into action that helps them; and it's these acts that allow you to earn their trust over time.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN LEADERSHIP AND MANAGEMENT

Is there a difference between leadership and management? According to Seth Godin, there sure is. And, in a rapidly changing world, leaders – not managers – are the people we need to take us into the future.

So what's the difference? Seth argues it comes down to striving for excellence (instead of quality), taking responsibility, and searching for enrollment, among a few other things.

Our recent podcast features a full keynote by Seth on the topic. Listen and enjoy!
